

Self Check-In

Using what you have learned about the history of Jewish involvement in the Labor Movement and from the game Jewish Time Jump: New York, take a few minutes to answer the following questions by yourself.

1. In today's world, what kind of working conditions might be considered unfair, unjust, or abusive? Who are the workers in today's world that are most affected by unfair work conditions?
2. Thinking back to the previous lesson, what does Jewish tradition teach us about the responsibilities of workers and employers?
3. Do unfair working conditions affect you personally even if you're not the worker experiencing those conditions? If so, how?
4. Often, the public relations departments of companies don't tell the whole story or share complete information about how their products are made. What kinds of questions might you ask to determine how different companies treat their workers?
